Pastor's Corner - THEOLOGY OF THE BODY (10)

Pope Paul VI's encyclical, Humanae Vitae – which reaffirmed the Church's constant teaching on the immorality of contraception – fell like a bomb on the Church in 1968. If it was understandable that people outside the Church might dismiss the papal pronouncement as antiquated gibberish, the uproar the encyclical caused within the Church showed how far the Cartesian view of man had seeped into the minds of Catholics. Modern rationalism presents only “partial truths” about man and effectively divorces him from the “great mystery” of his body and of spousal love. Paul VI recognized this disconnection when he stated: “The problem of birth [regulation], like every other problem regarding human life, is to be considered beyond partial perspectives.” It must be seen “in light of a total vision of man and of his vocation, not only his natural and earthly but also his supernatural and eternal vocation” (HV 7). This was John Paul II's cue. Paul VI did not provide this “total vision of man and his vocation.” John Paul II does and that, in large measure, is what his TOB is.

....On the tenth anniversary of Humanae Vitae, Cardinal Wojtyla described the issue of contraception as a “struggle for the value and the meaning of humanity itself.” Just two and a half months later when he assumed the Chair of Peter, John Paul II knew he had to make a compelling case for Humanae Vitae. For he understood that widespread use of contraception was effectively disorienting “the deepest substratum of human ethics and culture” (TOB 45:3). It was thus altering humanity's course at its foundations – away from a culture of love and life and toward a culture of utility and death. (The above paragraphs are taken from the book, Theology of the Body Explained, pp.68-70, by Christopher West). More to come.

Rincón del Párroco—Teología del Cuerpo (10)

La encíclica Humanae Vitae del Papa Pablo VI, que reafirmó la enseñanza constante de la Iglesia sobre la inmoralidad de la anticoncepción, cayó como una bomba sobre la Iglesia en 1968. Si fue comprensible que personas ajenas a la Iglesia pudieran descartar el pronunciamiento papal como un galimatías anticuado, el alboroto que la encíclica provocó dentro de la Iglesia mostró hasta qué punto la visión Cartesiana del hombre se había filtrado en la mente de los católicos. El racionalismo moderno presenta sólo “verdades parciales” sobre el hombre y efectivamente lo divorcia a el del “gran misterio” de su cuerpo y del amor de su cónyuge. Pablo VI reconoció esta desconexión cuando afirmó: “El problema de la natalidad [regulación], como cualquier otro problema relacionado con la vida humana, debe ser considerado más allá de las perspectivas parciales”. Debe verse “a la luz de una visión total del hombre y de su vocación, no sólo su vocación natural y terrenal, sino también sobrenatural y eterna” (HV 7). Esta fue la señal de Juan Pablo II. Pablo VI no proporcionó esta “visión total del hombre y de su vocación”. Juan Pablo II lo hace y eso, en gran medida, es su TOB.

... En el décimo aniversario de Humanae Vitae, el Cardinal Wojtyla describió el tema de la anticoncepción como una “lucha por el valor y el significado de la humanidad misma”. Apenas dos meses y medio después, cuando asumió la presidencia de Pedro, Juan Pablo II sabía que tenía que presentar un caso convincente a favor de la Humanae Vitae. Porque entendió que el uso generalizado de la anticoncepción estaba efectivamente desorientando “el sustrato más profundo de la ética y la cultura humanas” (TOB 45:3). Por lo tanto, estaba alterando el curso de la humanidad en sus cimientos: alejándose de una cultura de amor, vida y hacia una cultura de utilidad y muerte. (Los párrafos anteriores están tomados del libro de Theology of the Body Explained, pp.68-70, de Christopher West). Más por venir.

Day of Prayer for the Unborn

Today, In addition to our prayers for unborn children and for an end to the misery and devastation of abortion, let's pray for all women who have had abortions, for women who at this very moment may be considering abortion as their only option, and for fathers who have participated in or advocated for this tragic decision. Pray that all receive the support, tools, and practical and spiritual assistance that will allow them to move away from the fear, coercion, and desperation that drive people to this sad and lonely choice. Pray that all men and women who are contemplating or have had abortions or have played a part in seeking abortions can experience the love and forgiveness of Christ, who awaits them with open arms.

Día de oración por los no nacidos

Hoy, además de nuestras oraciones por los niños no nacidos y por el fin de la miseria y la devastación del aborto, oremos por todas las mujeres que han abortado, por las mujeres que en este mismo momento pueden estar considerando el aborto como su única opción, y por padres que han participado o abogado por esta trágica decisión. Ore para que todos reciban el apoyo, las herramientas y la asistencia práctica y espiritual que les permitan alejarse del miedo, la coerción y la desesperación que llevan a las personas a esta triste y solitaria elección. Ore para que todos los hombres y mujeres que están contemplando o han tenido un aborto o han participado en la búsqueda de abortos puedan experimentar el amor y el perdón de Cristo, que los espera con los brazos abiertos.
